Why attend?

Workplace bullying can have a significant impact on worker wellbeing, organisational culture, and business performance. This webinar will provide practical guidance for employers, managers, HR professionals and safety practitioners on preventing and addressing workplace bullying in the workplace.

It will also help you:

- Understand workplace bullying and its role as a psychosocial hazard in the workplace.
- Recognise the HSA's role and available resources to support the prevention and management of workplace bullying.
- Identify the organisational factors that help create the conditions for successful prevention and intervention.

Who should attend?

Senior leaders, employers, HR professionals, people managers, safety and health professionals, employee relations practitioners, workplace wellbeing leads, employee representatives, policymakers, and public sector managers with responsibility for workplace culture, wellbeing, and occupational safety and health.

Guest Speaker

Dr Chloë Gough, is a work psychologist and chartered psychologist (by research) who specialises in consulting on and researching unethical workplace behaviours. The main focus of Dr Gough's work is helping organisations to understand how they can enhance the effectiveness of change programmes that seek to prevent and address unethical workplace behaviours such as bullying.

She is currently based in the UK Cabinet Office and works extensively with various government departments, helping them understand and improve their approach towards bullying prevention.
